Fiber Festival Fosters Artistic Collaboration

Anne Ramey (in her Norse dress with beaded festoon) and her husband Ray Ramey dressed as their SCA personas Jehanette de Provins and Refkell Melrakk Einarsson.

by Alethea Kenney
The Fosston Fiber Festival 2015 featured instructors on various fiber art techniques, including Anne Ramey, the instructor who taught netting. While at the festival, Anne met one of the vendors, Julie Hart, a lampwork artist from Indiana who had her handmade glass beads for sale. Anne is involved in the Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA). Through her research for the SCA, Anne knew that Viking period dress included glass beads used as a festoon (up to several strands of glass beads, small tools and other embellishments that hung between brooches worn on the shoulders of a woman's dress). Working with Julie, Anne was able to recreate an accurate dress with festoon to wear at a Crown Tournament event with the SCA. This meticulously handcrafted dress, including beads, will be on display at the Fosston Fiber Festival October 1-2, 2016.

Below is an interview with Anne about her involvement with the SCA and the dress and costumes she makes and an interview with Julie Hart about bead making in Viking times and how this differs from the modern methods.

Kenney: "Is there a particular time period or place where this outfit would have been common?"

Ramey: "My husband's persona is 10th century Norse, but given that I don't do Viking very often, I aimed for early Norse and think I did pretty well."

Kenney: "What other materials would have been used to make this outfit and do you stay true to the original? If not, where do you make changes and why?"

Ramey: "The clothing likely would have been wool, the weaving almost definitely would have been wool. Given my wool allergies, I opted for neither. The apron dress is a linen (which is an appropriate historical substitute), and the weaving was done with a woollook acrylic. In the underdress, I could not find a white linen heavy enough to give the real heraldic white punch I was going for, so I went with a cotton. Given the purpose of the garment, the heraldic blue and white colors were very important for this particular garment. The embroidery for the seam treatments is a historically appropriate stitch, but was done in cotton instead of wool. This gave a similar look without allergy issues."

Kenney: "Can you give a brief explanation of the SCA and the Crown Tournament event?"

Ramey: "The SCA is an educational recreation society where we work on recreating the period from 600-1600, mostly focusing on Europe, but there are folks who have focus elsewhere. I say recreation rather than re-enactment because we don't seek to reenact exact battles as they were or act as specific known historical people. Instead, we focus on learning about the time period and recreate in the spirit and flavor of the best of the time (leaving out things like the plague and other undesirables). Many people focus their study on a particular time and place and create a persona from there. That is who they are in the society. This isn't an actual known historical person, but someone who could have lived in that time and place. I, for example, am Jehanette de Provins, a late 14th century French lady. My Husband is Refkell Melrakk Einarsson, a 10th century Norseman. We each try and play to our persona most of the time, though I will, occasionally play Norse to match him. I did this Norse outfit for the Crown Tournament in the spring, since we were fighting under his coat of arms. Crown Tournament is how each Kingdom within the SCA (we live in Northshield), determines it's next King and Queen. Each King and Queen reign for 6 months. Crown Tournament is a Tournament of Armored Combat (think knights in armor), which is one of the sports you can participate in the SCA. Since the tourney has such an important purpose, there is often much pomp and circumstance. For more information about the SCA, you can check out www.sca.org."

Kenney: "Thank you Anne."

Interview with Julie Hart:
Kenney: "What is the modern method for heating glass to make beads?"

Hart: "I use a small propane oxygen gas mix torch to heat glass rods to 1700F. Once the bead is finished, it is annealed in a digitally controlled kiln to hold the bead at a specific temperature and cool it slowly to prevent cracking and breaking of the glass. Glass melts at 1300F but even at 1020F, a bead will start to melt a bit and lose its shape."

Kenney: "How does this differ from the way Vikings would have made beads?"

Hart: "Vikings had to use a wood fire built in an oven, with bellows used to bring more oxygen to create a hotter fire. Although the glass I use now is the same as the glass used then (soda ash, lime and silica), the Vikings, through trade, got much of their glass from square mosaic tiles made in Italy, called tesserae. Now, I use glass rods made specifically for lampworking."

Kenney: "How do you get the colors in the glass? How would the Vikings have used this?"

Hart: "Different colors are produced by different metals,

Ray and Anne Ramey in their SCA personas and Viking costumes showing the back of the Viking dress.

such as copper, silver, gold. One technique for producing decorations on a bead is done now just like the Vikings would have. I wrap the bead in gold or silver foil, encase it in clear glass and then put it back into the flame. This keeps the heat from burning the foil off the bead. "For the beads in Anne's festoon, I researched Viking glass beads found at archeological sites. I made reproductions using colors and decorative techniques that the Vikings would have used. Some examples are dots on dots, raking (dragging hot glass around the bead using a metal pick) and using twisted stringers."

Kenney: "Thank you Julie."

Anne Ramey has been a member of the SCA for about 16 years and takes much pleasure in the Arts & Sciences part of the SCA world. She creates all her garb (clothing) and strives for a good amount of historical accuracy. She enjoys the research part of this as well as doing the ostuming, weaving, braiding, embroidery and netting. Because there is always so much going on in the SCA, she is able to learn something new from others. For the last number of years, she has also counted herself among the "enablers" who have been fostering others to learn new arts and grow in the society.

Julie Hart is a lampwork bead artist who has been working with glass since 2005. She uses a wide range of techniques that she has honed through classes with several noted outstanding artists.

Anne Ramey will be teaching a beginning inkle weaving workshop on Saturday, October 1 and a beginning netting workshop Sunday October 2. Julie Hart will be a vendor at the Fosston Fiber Festival again this year. For more information about the festival or the artists and instructors, see fosstonfiberfestival.com or 218-657-2502.

Minnesota National Guard's Camp Ripley Training Center damaged by severe weather

Camp Ripley received significant storm damage after 10:00 p.m. on September 7, 2016 as storm cells passed through Morrison County. There were no injuries caused by the severe weather, though several buildings used for housing, training and maintenance received major damage. There was also major damage to the nearly completed 10-megawatt solar array that was set to be dedicated next week. The dedication has been postponed to a yet to be determined future date.

"We were extremely fortunate, all our people are safe," said Col. Scott St. Sauver, Camp Ripley Garrison Commander. "We can repair buildings and replace damaged equipment, but our people are irreplaceable."

Damage assessments continue today, but most damage consist of collapsed roofs, fallen trees, debris and damaged vehicles throughout garrison areas of Camp Ripley.

Marshall County resident wins big

ROSEVILLE, Minn. (Sept. 8, 2016) – "Christmas will be good this year!" said Brad Lorenson of Warren as he claimed a $50,000 prize from the Big Money scratch game on Sept. 6.

Lorenson purchased the winning ticket during a routine stop at 175 Corner Store LLC in Warren on Sept. 2. "I was in shock," he recalled. "I couldn't believe it. I just stood there for a while for quite a while—I was amazed!"

Lorenson says he plans to pay down debt and save some for a down payment on a home. When asked if he was going to do anything fun, he replied, "Christmas will be good this year!"

Ask a Trooper

by Sgt. Jesse Grabow Minnesota State Patrol

Q u e s - tion: What are the driver's license requirements and equipment laws for the new three-wheel type motorcycle vehicles?

Answer: The law changed on this August 1.

An auto cycle is a motorcycle that:

- has three wheels in contact with the ground;
- is designed with seating that does not require operators or any occupants to straddle or sit astride it;
- has a steering wheel;
- is equipped with antilock brakes; and
- is originally manufactured to meet federal motor vehicle safety standards for motorcycles.

Under the revised law, a person may operate an auto cycle with a valid driver's license. A motorcycle endorsement or a three-wheel motorcycle restriction is not required. Someone in an auto cycle can drive one of these on a regular class D driver's license with no motorcycle endorsement or restrictions.

Persons riding within an enclosed cab auto cycle are exempt from wearing protective headgear and eye-protective device. A properly adjusted and fastened seat belt, including both the shoulder and lap belt when the auto cycle is so equipped, shall be worn by the driver and any passengers.

Polaris Slingshots, for example, are open cab and would then require proper headgear/eye protection.

Since the auto cycle seats are not straddled but equipped with regular seats and have the use of seat belts – all seat belt and child restraint laws would apply.

A portion of state statutes were used with permission from the Office of the Revisor of Statutes. If you have any questions concerning traffic related laws or issues in Minnesota, send your questions to Trp. Jesse Grabow – Minnesota State Patrol at 1000 Highway 10 West, Detroit Lakes, MN 56501-2205. (You can follow him on Twitter @MSPPIO_NW or reach him at, jesse.grabow@state.mn.us).

Minneapolis Moline at Rollag

By Auctioneer, Eric Mickelson

I anticipate Labor Day weekend like some people anticipate the first day of pro football, birthdays, or vacations. Not exactly because of the holiday but because of the Western Minnesota Steam Threshers Reunion, in Rollag, MN. I am sure I could check my photo albums to know for sure, but I believe I have only missed the big show twice in the last twenty or so years.

This year I had a conflict. If you read last week's article you saw a picture of my son, his new bride, and her father. You see my oldest son, Nick, got married on Saturday of Labor Day Weekend. Now let's think about weddings. Friday we had the wedding rehearsal and groom's supper, Saturday the wedding, and Sunday we traveled home from Wisconsin. What a great weekend, but wait that only leaves one day to get to Rollag, Monday, Labor Day!! Well, I guess you could say the father and mother of the groom were a bit tired. But I just had to sneak away to Rollag. My dear sweet wife has been so gracious to attend many tractor shows this summer, so she opted to stay home and can some tomatoes. So I headed out on my yearly pilgrimage to Rollag!

This year's feature was Minneapolis Moline. This is one reason I couldn't miss it. MM is one of my favorite brands of tractors. The first tractor I ever purchased with my own money was a ZB Minneapolis Moline. Dad tells many stories about farming with a model U MM Standard, and later on a UB Diesel.

I think they were pretty good tractors for my dad and grandfather, so MM tractors always sparked my interest. Rollag had gotten a lot of rain on the weekend and even a shower on Monday morning so to my surprise it was not very crowded. I entered the grounds and watched some corn chopping with a stationary chopper. Then watched them shell some corn with a MM sheller. Next, off to a food stand to have one of my Rollag favorites, Rommegrot!!! Yum Yum!!! After that great snack I headed for the "General Store" to look for a

MM t-shirt. Yes, they had a nice one in my size so I now had my outfit for day one of the school year. You see on the first day of school I nearly always wear my new Rollag shirt!! After a little more site seeing I found a front row seat for the 2:00 o'clock parade. It was the best parade seat I had ever had, front row right in front of the building they announce the parade from. First they drew a ticket for the MM Model R tractor they were giving away and GUESS WHAT.....I didn't win this year either! I enjoyed that parade so much!!! Front row seat and hearing a little about each tractor coming by, it was fun. Being the last day of the show after the parade they start shutting things down. I took one trip up on the hill where they were displaying most of the MM tractors they had. I took a few pictures and headed on my way. Walking back to the care is always bittersweet. Fun to be at Rollag and getting to see the sights again, but knowing it will be another year until I can head back to the WMSTR at Rollag, MN!!

Companions: Building on a proven idea to help seniors remain independent, age well

If you're finding that you might need a little extra support traveling to medical appointments, grocery shopping, running errands or getting the bills paid and in the mailbox, Lutheran Social Service of Minnesota may have a solution. Neighbor to Neighbor Companions is a new option that can make life easier and more manageable. As trained advocates and friendly visitors, they provide support specifically tailored to the needs of older adults.

The new service, being launched by Lutheran Social Service of Minnesota, is patterned after the Senior Companion Program that has been around for over 40 years in Minnesota. Its goal is to promote health and independence – particularly for adults over the age of 55. With rapidly aging communities, particularly in rural Minnesota, Neighbor to Neighbor Companions allows these services to become more widely available.

The initiative is part of a national pilot project through a collaboration with Lutheran Services in America. The goal is to test proven service models in news ways to improve lives for a rapidly aging population, especially in rural communities. Neighbor to Neighbor Companions is expected to be replicated in other parts of the country through nonprofit organizations like Lutheran Social Service.

“It’s a wildly successful idea that has been around for decades to meet the everyday needs of aging Minnesotans who want to maintain their highest level of independence and continue to make valuable contributions to older adults as they age,” explained Mark Cullen, a senior director in Older Adult Services for Lutheran Social Service of Minnesota. “We’re excited to build on this service that has a proven track record and make it available to everyone who needs it.”

Every day, 10,000 people reach the age of 65. Currently, individuals who are 65 years or older represent 14.5% of the U.S. population, about one in every seven Americans, according to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. That number is expected to grow to 21.7% of the population by 2040.

Cullen said that this service is especially needed in rural areas where services for older adults vary significantly and are scarce in some communities. Informal caregivers, especially for older adults without family support nearby, will be vital to a growing number of older adults who need helping with daily living tasks to live full and independent lives. Services like these are also expected to alleviate budget challenges for the Minnesota Department of Human Services whose spending on older adults support is projected to grow substantially in the future.

Companions serve as friendly visitors each week and offer specific support needed by older adults that may include transportation to appointments, grocery shopping, errands or simple household tasks. They can also serve as an important social connection by being a companion for lunch or providing a safety check on more isolated older adults.

Companions are carefully selected and matched with older adults. Each companion receives a background check, training, and a motor vehicle records check. Matches also aim to bring together shared interests between companions and older adults. The volunteers are managed by LSS staff.

Lutheran Social Service is currently taking applications for companions who want to make a valuable contribution to the lives of their neighbors. “Our companions and the people they visit often become friends and it’s a win for everyone involved,” Cullen said.

Lutheran Social Service of Minnesota began in 1865 when a Lutheran pastor and his congregation opened an orphanage for children near Red Wing in southeastern Minnesota. Today, with 2,300 employees and 8,000 volunteers, Lutheran Social Service helps one in 65 Minnesotans through services that inspire hope, change lives and build community. Statewide, the organization seeks to foster safe and supportive homes for children, restore health and wellness in families, empower people with disabilities to live the lives they imagine, and promote health, independence and quality of life for older adults.
